

PHOTO RELEASE: "RACE THE WAVE" FUN RUN RAISES AWARENESS ABOUT CASCADIA THREAT (PHOTO)

News Release from Oregon Office of Emergency Management

Posted on FlashAlert: September 28th, 2014 4:43 PM

Downloadable file: 140607-FS713-38.jpg

Downloadable file: 140607-FS713-36.jpg

Downloadable file: 140607-FS713-35.jpg

Downloadable file: 140607-FS713-34.jpg

Downloadable file: 140607-FS713-33.jpg

140607-FS713-33

A "Race the Wave" participant looks at educational materials as other participants finish the event along a tsunami evacuation fun run highlighting local preparedness accomplishments in the city of Cannon Beach and Clatsop County to raise awareness about the Cascadia Subduction Zone threat. Citizens of Cannon Beach, the City of Cannon Beach, the Oregon Office of Emergency Management, and FEMA partnered for the event to approach a serious topic in fun manner, Sept. 28, in Cannon Beach. The race finished at supply cache containers and included an emergency preparedness fair.

(Photo by Cory Grogan, Oregon Office of Emergency Management)

140607-FS713-34

Participants look at emergency preparedness materials after "Race the Wave", a tsunami evacuation fun run highlighting local preparedness accomplishments in the city of Cannon Beach and Clatsop County to raise awareness about the Cascadia Subduction Zone threat. Citizens of Cannon Beach, the City of Cannon Beach, the Oregon Office of Emergency Management, and FEMA partnered for the event to approach a serious topic in fun manner, Sept. 28, in Cannon Beach. The race finished at supply cache containers and included an emergency preparedness fair.

(Photo by Cory Grogan, Oregon Office of Emergency Management)

140607-FS713-35

A participant shows off her t-shirt at "Race the Wave" tsunami evacuation fun run highlighting local preparedness accomplishments in the city of Cannon Beach and Clatsop County to raise awareness about the Cascadia Subduction Zone threat. Citizens of Cannon Beach, the City of Cannon Beach, the Oregon Office of Emergency Management, and FEMA partnered for the event to approach a serious topic in fun manner, Sept. 28, in Cannon Beach. The race finished at supply cache containers and included an emergency preparedness fair.

(Photo by Cory, Oregon Office of Emergency Management)

140607-FS713-36

Oregon congressional representative Suzanne Bonamici presents to participants near supply cache containers at "Race the Wave", a tsunami evacuation fun run highlighting local preparedness accomplishments in the city of Cannon Beach and Clatsop County to raise awareness about the Cascadia Subduction Zone threat. Citizens of Cannon Beach, the City of Cannon Beach, the Oregon Office of Emergency Management, and FEMA partnered for the event to approach a serious topic in fun manner, Sept. 28, in Cannon Beach.

(Photo by Cory Grogan, Oregon Office of Emergency Management)

140607-FS713-38

Oregon legislative representative and emergency preparedness advocate Deborah Boone pauses for a moment near supply cache containers at "Race the Wave", a tsunami evacuation fun run highlighting local preparedness accomplishments in the city of Cannon Beach and Clatsop County to raise awareness about the Cascadia Subduction Zone threat. Citizens of Cannon Beach, the City of Cannon Beach, the Oregon Office of Emergency Management, and FEMA partnered for the event to approach a serious topic in fun manner, Sept. 28, in Cannon Beach.

(Photo by Cory Grogan, Oregon Office of Emergency Management)

Contact Info:

Cory Grogan or Kim Lippert

Oregon Office of Emergency Management Public Information

(503) 383-6608 or (503) 378-2911 x2283