OLCC names Shannon Hoffeditz as Portland Metro Public Safety Manager

Portland, Ore. – Shannon Hoffeditz has been named Portland Metro Public Safety Manager for the Oregon Liquor Control Commission effective March 1, 2014.

Hoffeditz is a veteran of the OLCC with more than 19 years at the agency. She recently served as the state-wide Compliance Technician for the Public Safety Division. Prior to her promotion to Compliance Technician, Hoffeditz was a Liquor Inspector for ten years out of the Milwaukie headquarters office. During her years as an Inspector, she developed and maintained extensive partnerships with law enforcement and networked with businesses and community groups working on a wide range of public safety issues.

“Shannon is a true collaborator,” says John Eckhart, Public Safety Director. “She has a long history of working with the businesses we license to make sure they understand liquor laws and give them the tools they need to be successful. She has a positive attitude and leadership mentality that can help our team do great things for our licensees.”

Hoffeditz has a Bachelor's of Science degree from Eastern Oregon State University majoring in Administration and Economics with a minor in Human Resources Management.
