Deschutes Public Library					We do not record the age of the child, so I randomly divided 0-5 and 6-11, based on observation. We implemented a new way of recording reading/listening this year, and it doesn't match up with the categories in this survey. We asked people to read/listen 24/7, which means at least 24 minutes each day, and when they completed 7 days they were in the reading program and got their free book. But they might have read more than 24 minutes, and the 7 days might not have been in a row, so there's no way to tabulate the total of time read or the number of days. Instead, we were encouraging the reading habit of reading every day.

Douglas County Library System					Douglas County Library System used surveys, one at sign-up and another one half-way through the summer, to gauge how much children registered were reading. At sign-up, 33% of the children reported reading 2 hours per week or more, and by the second half of the summer that number grew to 55% of the children were reading 2 or more hours per week, a remarkable increase of 21%.

Hillsboro Public Library				54,285	A few quotes from Hillsboro summer readers in answer to 'what do you like best about summer reading'? Love to read to my little brother. I get to read more. I'm really into superhero books right now. I like how I can remember everything I learned from school. (No, we did not pay her to say this!) I learned new stories this summer. I learned new words. I like reading in my free time. At night I like to be read to. I like when my dad reads to me. Per WCCLS, 70% of adults countywide thought that the SRP-related eblasts they received definitely expanded their reading horizons.

Banks Public Library	0	0	Since we have a limited budget for programming, we appreciate having the Oregon College Savings Plan-sponsored program. The quality of performers is excellent! It might be helpful to us in coordinating the scheduling of the OCSP performer with the WCCLS-sponsored programs to know earlier in the year if we will have a performer and when that person will be available so that we can include that in our scheduling, rather than having to add it on later in the summer, when our attendance tends to be lower.

Curry Public Library			Our registration increased by 40 participants. We broke the age groups up a little more and had "Young Teen" 6-8 grades, and "Young Adults" 9-12 grades. with slightly different goals for each group. We also asked less from the "Read to Me" group this year, their goals were lowered to make it more it more attainable, and we saw a greater rate of success.

Douglas County Library System			Here at DCLS, in addition to special presentations we incorporated a good deal of passive programming. This included creativity tables and self-directed activities that could be done by participants anytime they visited the library. This proved successful in light of significant reductions in staffing we faced due to budget cuts this fiscal year.

Echo Public Library			Approximately 7 children that didn't sign up for the reading program attended at least 1 of the programs and all of the children who signed up, but didn't turn in reading lists attended at least one program. Our attendance dropped off for the last 3 weeks as the school ran a summer school and rewarded those who attended their program by taking them to the pool at the neighboring town on Fridays (our program day)

Jefferson County Library District	2	25	We held programs for children in 4 locations throughout the library district, traveling up to 30 miles to bring entertainers, games, and crafts to the various communities in our county.
Jefferson Public Library			We placed stuffed animals in stores and agencies around Jefferson. When kids found them, they could come to the library, tell us where they saw them, and get entered in a prize drawing for that animal. It was a huge hit. Store owners enjoyed it, kids and their parents got involved, and it was good publicity for the library. We already have a giant moose for next year.

Multnomah County Library			Programming at MCL is planned, budgeted, led, and evaluated by a different department than Summer Reading. No Ready to Read funds support these programs. It's difficult to fill out this survey every year without knowing what the questions are in advance so we can pull together the right staff to process data. Seeing them when when the survey is almost completely filled out creates a stopping point in the survey - and surveymonkey doesn't allow us to save the data we've entered in so far. It would be useful to get an email listing all questions in advance so we can work with staff to have this ready to go before starting the survey process.

Banks Public Library		When we had the certificates in the past, most participants have declined the offer to receive one. We did not want to waste resources on unused copies. Again - many participants are not part of the 'paper generation', which may influence whether they want another piece of paper.
